1415 AD

Gold from western Africa fueled commercial enterprise, and Italians asserted sea power in the Mediterranean. Mental vigor was manifest in the formulation of the laws of perspective, in FLORENCE around 1415; at the very vanishing point where art, science, mathematics, architecture, and map-making all converged.

Battle of AGINCOURT

Clock of 100 YRS War

5-wk siege of the Norman harbor of HARFLEUR, which opened 15th phase of the war, Henry's (Henry V of England) army suffered heavily from disease. Once the city fell to hunger & Henry's 12 large bombards, the King's advisers recommended that he end the campaign and return to England: He refused. He insisted in leading

1000 men-at-arms & 5,000 archers across northern France towards English base at CALAIS. He was cut off near ABINCOURT by a French force of about 20,000.

The English archers repulsed a preliminary attack of Courtenay. At the end French losses may have been 10,000 compared to a few hundred English casualties.

The French never again dared to challenge Henry in the field. This greatly facilitated his conquest of Normandy (1417-1419) leading to the Treaty of Troyes (1420) by which Henry was recognized as the heir and regent of Charles VI of France.
